Look Who's Coming!
Thank you to all our Annual Fund Donors.

Albertosaurus

is coming to South Carolina!

Thanks to overwhelming support from our statewide community for the Fund For Excellence the children of South Carolina are well on their way to getting their very own dinosaur.

Rudy Mancke's first letter generated a fantastic response, and if you have already made a gift to this important project, thank you! However, we still have a ways to go before we can settle Albertosaurus in his new home at the State Museum.

If you have not yet contributed, please do so today! If you have already given, won't you consider an additional gift?

Everyone who contributes to the 1998-99 Annual Fund for Excellence will be invited to a preview reception for the big unveiling. The date will be early fall, and you will receive a special invitation.

Thanks to all of you, we'll never have to disappoint another child, because South Carolina's children can visit their dinosaur any time they want.

You're invited!

Friends members, mark your calendars

You are cordially invited to join us at these exclusive members-only events.

18th ANNUAL FRIENDS MEETING

Saturday, April 24

A real treat for our Friends members! Join us for our 18th annual meeting followed by a keynote address by renowned author and historian Walter Edgar, Ph.D. You've seen his highly-acclaimed book, "South Carolina: A History." Now meet the man behind this literary triumph. Reception and booksigning to follow. Please call the Friends office (803) 898-4935 no later than April 19 to reserve your place!

STAR TREK™ Lands

The crowd began to gather early on Friday evening, Jan. 30. Rumors were flying that a UFO had been sighted in the night sky near the State Museum. By early evening, hundreds of spectators and members of the media had assembled, hoping to catch a glimpse of history in the making!

Suddenly, at exactly 7:30, to the whine of powerful engines, a brilliant light swept across the dark sky. The crowd gasped as the UFO hovered directly over the State Museum and static, unintelligible transmissions filled the air. Without warning, smoke began to pour from the right corner of the Museum, as an alien space pod revealed itself, moving slowly toward the crowd. As the doors of the pod opened, out stepped an alien creature. STAR TREK: Federation Science™ had landed!

With this exciting arrival, the STAR TREK exhibit is attracting thousands of visitors. Totally hands-on and direct from the sets of Paramount Pictures, this entertaining, educational exhibit is proving to be the most popular program the Museum has provided.

Thanks to the corporate sponsorship of Wachovia, Bell-South, SCANA and UPS, STAR TREK will be appearing at the State Museum through May 2. To accommodate visitors, the Museum is open until 8:00 on Tuesday nights. Admission to the exhibit is $2.50 in addition to admission to the Museum.

from the Past

"Look, mom, no cavities!" "Relief is only a swallow away!" "N-e-s-t-l-e-s, Nestle's makes the very best — chocolate!" These and other ad jingles, as well as program samples, recall the golden age of television, a period that is encapsulated in the State Museum's newly-opened television area of the Communications exhibit.

"Everybody can relate to television," says Curator of Technology Nat Pendleton, "but hardly anyone knows where it came from, the history of how it developed."

The new exhibit, with photographs, historic broadcasting equipment and classic TV sets, tells that story through four themes: the origin of television as a national medium; TV's entry into South Carolina in the 1950s; the story of Greenville native Thomas T. Goldsmith, who pioneered TV with the Dumont network; and the display of home sets from the 1940s to the 1960s.

"I hope people will be able to connect what they have in their living rooms with TV's past, and get a better appreciation of how hard it was back then to put a show on the air," says Pendleton.

Not only that, but viewing the film clips of those old shows and commercials, they'll get a quick lesson on the history of fashion and hairstyles, too!

Bedtime

May 29 in the Lipscomb Art Gallery.

The exhibit will include beds from the museum's collection as well as some, such as Middleton's, that are on loan from the Governor's Mansion. "It's a good opportunity for us to show parts of our collection that are rarely shown," says Polly Laffitte, chief curator of art. "The decorative arts are reflective of the tastes and the social structure of a particular time." They also help tell some good stories.

To keep the focus on the design of the beds, most will not be dressed, Laffitte says. Some, however, will be covered with white-work textiles from the museum's collections. A particular prize is a quilt stitched by Andrew Johnson, 17th president of the United States, and Sarah Word, the Laurens County woman he hoped to marry. Miss Word's parents evidently did not feel Johnson, then a tailor, was good enough for their daughter. "But he was a better stitcher than she was," Laffitte says.

The exhibit may be seen until Sept. 12.

Arthur Middleton, a signer of the Declaration of Independence, was so attached to his Chippendale-style four-poster that he took it with him on military campaigns during the American Revolution. But surely the owner of a doll cradle made of spools loved her bed just as much.

Visitors to the State Museum can see these and other fascinating places to sleep when the exhibit Bed Time opens recent acquisitions

What does it take to tell the story of South Carolina?
Just about everything!

That fact is amply demonstrated in the State Museum's Recent Acquisitions Gallery, which includes objects as diverse as:

- an exquisitely carved oak-and-mahogany cabinet from Carpenter Brothers Pharmacy in Greenville;
- a 1937 Dodge pickup truck (right) used to haul produce to the old Farmer's Market on Assembly Street in Columbia;
- a sculpture of the Cathedral of Notre Dame, which was built by self-taught artist L.C. Carson (1913-1998) of Orangeburg;
- Air Force uniforms worn by Kathy Lee of Columbia, who served in the military for 24 years;
- a silver ladle and spoons, which may have been used by Francis Marion, the South Carolina planter who became a legend as the "Swamp Fox."

These are just a few samples of the intriguing objects that recently have been given to the State Museum.

Grand Opening!

Speaking of recent donations, Elaine Nichols, curator of history, is looking for school-age children's fall and winter clothing that is in good condition. She will consider using it in the exhibit Dressed for the Occasion: Making a Statement with Clothes, which will open Feb. 2, 2001. Call her at (803) 898-4953 if you have garments that may be of interest.

Mural is Preserved for the Future

Woodruff's Depression-era post office mural, an artistic remembrance of a tough time, has found a new home at the State Museum.

As part of President Franklin Roosevelt's effort to lift America out of the Great Depression, the Works Progress Administration commissioned artists to paint murals in 2,000 U.S. post offices. Fourteen were created in South Carolina. Abraham Lishinsky, a New Yorker, painted "Cotton Harvest" in Woodruff in 1940.

Now the post office building has been sold. According to federal law, the mural must either be preserved on-site or moved to a place where it can be preserved and exhibited.

The museum was a natural choice. With the 1990 exhibit New Deal Art in South Carolina, "we were pioneers in researching and documenting this era of artistic activity in our state," says Polly Laffitte, chief curator of art. "Since it couldn't be preserved where it was, we were very pleased to take it on as a project."

Tony Rajer, a nationally known mural conservator, will teach a University of South Carolina Maymester course in which students will prepare the painting for exhibition. "It's quite a lovely piece," Rajer says. "It represents the first time the U.S. government actively intervened to create works of art for the common man."

Laffitte isn't sure where the mural will be placed in the museum. She would like to see it become the centerpiece of an exhibit about WPA murals in South Carolina.

NOTES

from our director

By Dr. Overton G. Ganong

To borrow a phrase from NASA, your State Museum is on "go" for OPT.

OPT is short for our Observatory, Planetarium and large-format Theater project. We have submitted a funding request to the legislature, and our lawmakers are now reviewing it.

OPT will be a unique state-of-the-art resource for science education and cultural enrichment. The observatory, equipped with a superb 12 -inch Alvan Clark telescope, will be connected to schools statewide via the Internet. This will allow teachers and students to receive telescopic images in their classrooms. The telescope also will be linked to the planetarium by closed-circuit television, giving students and visitors real-time close-ups of the sun during the day and of the moon, planets and stars at night.

The 150-seat planetarium, which has a 50-foot dome, will be equipped with satellite TV, a digital projector, a "full sky" system and interactive technology that will enable us to go light years beyond traditional programming. Students will follow live space missions projected on the dome, journey in virtual reality to Mars, fly through the constellations and explore the structures of human cells. Even history and geography programs will be possible. And the technology will allow the audience to participate.

The 270-seat IMAX-type theater will present 2-D and 3-D documentary films on a screen five stories high, immersing viewers in an overwhelming experience. Few will ever climb Mount Everest, pilot the space shuttle, or plumb the ocean depths, but these magnificent films will involve all ages in a way that is the "next best thing to being there."

OPT will be a partnership between the public and private sectors. We are asking the state to finance the construction and equipment, estimated at just over $15 million, while our State Museum Foundation will raise an endowment from private contributions to underwrite the recurring expenses. Once funded, the project will be complete in three years.

OPT is our vision for the 21st century. Already a Palmetto State treasure, your museum will become an even more dynamic, innovative center for education and enrichment. You can help make the OPPorTunities of OPT real. Call or write your state representatives and senators; let them know your interest and ask for their support. Together we can be OPTimistic about success.

State Museum Wins Governor's Arts Award

The Elizabeth O'Neill Verner Award, the Governor's Award for the Arts, will be presented to the State Museum in ceremonies May 5 at the State House.

South Carolina's most prestigious arts honor, the Verner award is given yearly to individuals and organizations that have made distinguished contributions to the arts in the Palmetto State. It is sponsored by the S.C. Arts Commission.

Guy Lipscomb, founding chairman of the museum's board of trustees and a nationally known artist, made the nomination. The arts commission board described the State Museum as "a major contributor to arts education and cultural enrichment in the state" and "a showcase for South Carolina's rich heritage." During the ten years the museum has been open, it has offered 51 exhibits of state and regional art and has featured the work of more than 600 of the state's established and emerging artists.

"This is a great honor for the museum and a tribute to the outstanding work that Polly (Laffitte, chief curator of art) has done in making our institution a major player in the state arts arena," said Dr. Overton Ganong, executive director of the museum. "The museum is proud to collect and exhibit the work of the state's most talented artists, past and present. We are committed to encouraging emerging artists, both formally trained and self-taught, and inspiring South Carolina's residents and visitors with their work."

Join The Fun!

Be a part of a fantastic new group at the State Museum. If you are interested in socializing with folks like you in the heart of the Congaree Vista... if historic ghost tours sound like frightening fun...or an artifact dig for prehistoric creatures is your idea of a great excursion... you've found your link!

These are just a few of the fun-filled events in store for members of the Impressions — an association of people like you which helps promote your State Museum. The Impressions is a vital link between the Museum and the professional community. We specialize in cultural, educational, social and FUN activities which help support the Museum.

If you are already a member of the Friends of the State Museum, or about to become one, we invite you to also join the Impressions. Friends members receive great benefits (including free museum admission, guest passes, exhibit opening receptions), AND as a member of the Impressions, you'll participate in terrific activities geared for people like you!

Call (803) 898-4935 for more information.

Annual dues of the Impressions are $15 in addition to your Friends dues. For membership levels please see our regular membership brochure. All contributions to the State Museum (above and beyond goods and services received) are tax deductible and help support the Museum's exhibits and educational programs.
